Matilda is a book written by Roald Dahl and is one of his most famous novels. He has won many prestigious awards and is one of the world’s best selling authors of all time. Altogether, the book contains approximately 240 pages. The book was written in 1988 and published the same year.

Matilda is a smart, easily infuriated, little girl who is misunderstood by her parents and despised by the school’s headmistress. On the other hand, her kind and considerate teacher, Miss Honey, thinks she is a marvelous academic genius. Matilda usually has a few extraordinary tricks up her sleeve, so her horrible parents and even more horrible headmistress had better watch out. Her antics will leave you in stitches.
While Matilda is the main character, readers will be drawn to the giant sized headmistress. She is a fearsome, imposing person with a sharp tongue. For example, she has called her students 'disgusting little cheat' and 'blithering idiot' and so on.

This book is excellently written by an extraordinary author. The book is entertaining, intriguing and is full of humour. I felt like I was part of Matilda's interesting life. Overall, I would highly recommend this to everyone of all ages, even my mum and dad!
